

ADVICE ON FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS

The funeral ceremony is of little value or comfort if you are left with the feeling that something - no matter what - has been left out.

Whilst this may seem unlikely at this time with all the different things that need to be done, please remember that there is no need to hurry anything - a hasty decision now may lead to regrets for a long time to come.

When, in a quiet moment, you have time to reflect on the arrangements that you have made, keep a pencil and paper close at hand. There are bound to be questions which will need an answer. Some points may have been overlooked, such as the special meaning shared between you about a particular road or view which, with planning, can be incorporated into the journey to the Cemetery, Crematorium or Church. Alternatively, you may have a treasured item of special meaning which you would like placed in the coffin.

No matter what the question or query, please feel free to ask. This is an important occasion and everything needs to be right.

Arrangements cannot be altered after the service has taken place. They can, however, be changed right up to the last minute. So no matter whether you want to add to the service or amend the commitment in any way, please just ask.

Our funeral service is available to you throughout the day or night and during weekends so there can be no excuse for regrets in time to come - almost anything and everything is possible.
